Rather the classic camp, with pretty outfits. The gymkhana. On Easter Sunday this year, this traditional festival also felt familiar in another way. Perhaps because it was back in the city where, just a few years ago, some of the worst violence this country had ever seen occurred. It is the same city that was so disturbed by riots in some suburbs just a few years earlier that they were broken up by police and forced to rebuild. Yes, the Easter Fair put its focus on fun, but it is also a great way for tens of thousands of Sydneysiders to reflect on the spirit of inclusion that characterises that community. It is a people's show. In the wake of the terrible violence of recent weeks in Blacktown and Parramatta, however, a feeling of tension seemed unavoidable. It is inevitable given the ongoing trade war between the US and China, exacerbated by the outbreak of the virus and the prospect of other economic disasters unfolding globally. As the news from the US worsened, the mood in Australia became darker.

Callichthyidae) from the drainage of the eastern slope of the Mekong River, Cambodia and Laos. Siluriforms comprising over 3,000 species are known worldwide and include most of the commercially valuable predatory fishes such as the major catfish of freshwater fisheries, the Murray River and black and white-striped catfishes that inhabit the tropical and subtropical streams and rivers. In Cambodia, several species of Varanus have been reported; however, no evidence of large-bodied predatory species has been found in the Mekong River. Here we describe one new species of Varanus from the drainage of the eastern slope of the Mekong River in Cambodia and Laos and one from the Mekong River in Laos. The new catfish, Varanasi kempfi sp. nov., belongs to the Varanus scoticus species-complex. The new species has a dark coloration in both common and dimorphic forms, with an estimated body length of 50-200 mm, a round, moderately convex head and a conspicuous protrusion on its lateral part of the body that develops into an ornamental spot on the dorsal part of the caudal fin in males. A second new species, Varanus plienkoae sp. nov., was found in the Mekong River drainage in Laos and is distinguished from all other species of the Varanus scoticus species-group, such as V. vali, V. maxwelli, V. marmoratus, V. malayensis and V. satyanarayana, on the basis of a number of morphological characters. Varanus plienkoae sp. nov. is also distinguished by its overall distinctive appearance, including a distinctive coloration pattern consisting of a dark band on the head and body, a less dark band on the back, a narrow and dark-
